

Abstract

The present invention relates generally to testing and management of telecommunication networks and equipment. More specifically, the present invention relates to measuring, analyzing, and improving voice quality, reliability, and interoperability of packet-based voice communication systems.